

A Tribe Called Women

2017 editorial themes

APRIL

Women Who Work

Women work, period. Whether at home or in an office, women are subjected daily to bias – overt or covert. Let's talk about times when that bias either made you miserable, got in the way of your career progression or made you feel "less than" because you opted out (or were forced out) of the workplace.

MAY

Competition Between Women

Far too often, and starting at a very young age, women are pitted against each other. Instead of empowering and inspiring each other, women can play into the bias and viciously tear each other down – in a way that just doesn't happen to men. Let's talk about times you found yourself either in competition with, or biased against, another woman. Found yourself on the receiving end? Share your story.

JUNE

What The F Word Really Means

It happened again: a woman said she's not a feminist. A man rolled his eyes at you and said there is no bias. Someone called you aggressive, bitch, bossy or a man-hater. What are the assumptions you see associated with feminism and what does being a feminist truly mean to you?

JULY

Finding Your Balance

There is so much pressure, specifically on women, to strike this perfect work-life balance. You may have found yourself on the receiving end of criticism for putting one before the other. How did you deal? How did you find your balance and what does that look like to you?

AUGUST

Inspirational Women

Who inspires you and why? Whether a public figure or a woman down the street, let's talk about the amazing women we know.

SEPTEMBER

Stand For More

Women deserve respect – but it doesn't always go well when we demand it. Tell us of a time you stood strong. What happened? What was the reaction? How did you overcome? Did anything change?

OCTOBER

The Weight Of A Woman

There is so much pressure on women, daily. Whether it has to do with our physical appearance, societal role, even our tone of voice – we hear it all. What pressures do you find yourself facing and how do you deal?

NOVEMBER

Mommy Wars

This one is big. Moms are dealt a rough hand. Seemingly everyone has an opinion on how you should be mothering and it can be soul-crushing to deal with. How have you faced this and how have you dealt with it?

DECEMBER

2018 Resolutions

Forget about anyone else, what do you want for yourself in 2018?